Autumn-Winter Clothing and Haberdashery For the Well-Dressed Man.

CRITICAL Men—men who insist upon high-class and distinctive apparel—will find the edicts of fashion apparent in full force "In Our Store for Men," and carefulness and thoroughness of selection everywhere evident.

Correct Clothes for Men— Fathers and Their Sons.

CLOTHING for the mature and the young men—not too brisk nor too sedate, but particularly smart in style, design, and fabric. The master artists who design and tailor our famous clothes put such conscientious care of detail into them that they are recognized as the foremost ready-for-service Men's Clothing. Permanent shapeliness, distinction, serviceability, and economy are always in these clothes, because the foundation is right—the linings thoroughly shrunken and correctly sized; hand-stitched and hand-worked padding, and the lapels and collars receive important consideration—which means that this clothing is built for service and comfort as well as appearance.

Suits, $20.00 to $35.00.
Overcoats, $18.00 to $35.00.

Other reliable makes of Clothing, $12.50 and upward.

GUDE COLLECTION SOLD AT AUCTION

Jewelry and Furniture Bring Low Prices.

Prompted partly by a desire to buy, but in many cases out of curiosity to see what sort of effects might have been in the possession of a diplomat, a fashionable thorough yesterday attended the sale of the personal belongings of the late O. Gude, former Minister to the United States from Norway.

Remarkably low prices prevailed, a necklace containing 131 pearls with a diamond locket attached bringing only $91, after spirited bidding. Several dealers took advantage of the low prices to buy in some of the heavier pieces of furniture.

Antiques in Collection.

The sale was held at Sloan's Art Gallery, 1607 G street. In the collection which belonged to the late diplomat there is furniture of the Empire, Queen Anne, Hepplewhite, Chippendale, Adam, Sheraton, colonial, and almost every other period. Rich mahogany furniture of all kinds and shapes is catalogued and so far those who have bought have secured almost unbelievable bargains. A mahogany library table, rich in design and material, brought $19.

The sale will be continued until all the effects have been disposed of. There will be a sale this morning at 11 o'clock and another one this afternoon at 3 o'clock. To-day there will be offered a wonderful collection of Louis XV and Louis XVI gilt furniture, elegant glass and china for ornamental and table use, and a profusion of rich bronzes, table silver, and antique jewelry.

"MUMS" PLEASE CROWDS.

More Than 10,000 Visitors Have Seen Show So Far.

As REBEY and Gladys, Mike and Maggie, young and old, strolled out of the Bureau of Plant Industry last night each clasped in hand a giant chrysanthemum, white or yellow of hue, and vowed that next year would again see them interested spectators of the greatest flower show they had ever looked upon.

Autumn blooms, beautiful beyond expectations, so pleased the visitors at the last night of the big "mum" show that it was with difficulty they were induced to leave the exhibition gardens. More than 10,000 visitors have visited the green houses during the show, and all were glad they had taken advantage of an opportunity to pay tribute to the fall's most popular blossom.

Among the 10,000 inmates of workhouses in Wales and Monmouthshire, Great Britain, barely 100 are capable of doing a good day's work.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

WE have a family cat. She is an extremely gentle little ball of silver gray fur, with benevolent yellow eyes. Such is the amiability of her disposition that we call her "Sweetness." Like the cat of washing powder fame, "she has never scratched yet."

That doesn't sound particularly alarming, does it?

And yet this inoffensive creature was the cause of a tremendous scene yesterday afternoon.

A visiting lady with a sturdy little boy of five or six years old, was in the living room with me when Sweetness took it into her head to stroll in and pay her respects.

The youngster looked up, caught sight of the little furry creature strolling toward him, and with a series of blood-curdling shrieks, which must have convinced the neighbors we had gone insane, and started murdering each other, and a leap, which by no fault of his just failed to upset the lamp, landed in his mother's arms.

It was some time before I grasped the situation, and left the room with the astonished Sweetness.

It was some time longer before his mother had ceased to murmur "No, no, the wicked old kitty wouldn't hurt him." "Was he frightened to death of the terrible kitty?" and similar courage-inspiring remarks.

When it was possible for her to set the boy down, she smoothed out her dress, straightened her hat, and turning to me with the same peculiar pride with which women tell of their illnesses, explained, "Yes, he is frightened to death of cats. We have to be so careful not to let one get anywhere near him. Does he inherit it? Oh, no—you see, when he was a baby a big cat jumped upon him as he was lying in his carriage and frightened him, and he has never gotten over it. We have had such a terrible time with him. Why once—"

And for ten minutes the visiting lady related occasions on which bold felines had approached too near her unfortunate Harry.

During the recital Harry stood beside her, listening proudly and occasionally promoting her with "And I had to have the doctor, didn't I, mamma?" "And I thought the table over, didn't I, mamma?"

"He has never gotten over it," the visiting lady had said.

Of course, not.

Why should he, when he realizes the pride his fond mother takes in his peculiarity?

Why should he, when every time he performs he holds the center of the stage for the next hour or two?

Why should he, when he is continually urged by the fear-stimulating suggestion of, "The terrible kitty won't hurt you," and things of that sort?

Why should he, when every premium is placed on fostering his terror, and none on overcoming it?

Sensible boy—of course, he will always regard the appearance of a cat as his cue to take the center of the stage with a war whoop.

I don't criticize him one bit. I think his course is the inevitable one. My only blame is for his mother and for any mother, who, like her, encourages a child to make a fetish of his fear instead of helping him to overcome it.

There are, of course, cases of inborn terror which cannot be entirely eradicated.

But such terror surely can be modified, and as far as possible hidden.

And even of such cases, I am afraid I am a bit apt to feel like the unsympathetic Dr. Johnson, when he says:

"There is one species of terror which those who are unwilling to suffer the reproach of cowardice have wisely dignified with the name of 'antipathy.'"

Mrs. Taft and her daughter, Miss Helen Taft, spent yesterday morning shopping in F street, mingling with the busy crowd on this thoroughfare and passing almost unheeded scores of people who would have gone far to see the wife and daughter of a President.
